“ I was watching the opening Olympic ceremonies in Sochi last night remembering the stunning costumes Pam and Susan created for our Russian show. It brought back so many fun memories! ...like going to their room at ND for final fittings where they were deliriously sewing into the night! Sugarette moms are the very best! Tracy, I'm sorry for your heartache and the pain that comes from being seperated but how great is our God and the hope we have in Jesus! I'm standing with you praying that the Lord's grace, peace and love would continue to be your strength and comfort. I love you.

“ Tracy, I am so sorry, I know how hard it is to loose a mom. I was trying to remember all the good times we shared at N.D. and in the gym. I remember your mom and Susan bringing in their sewing machines and sewing up until the last minute to finish costumes, and you know what, they always came through and had them done in time for dress rehearsal...:)

“ How much fun we all used to have. One day we cut down a tree that Lloyd didn't want cut down, he was not happy with us. We watched each others kids numerous times, and I watched Kim when she was in the hospital before Tracy was born. We had lots of fun, good times, talking, and laughing. The Baldwins were some very special neighbors. I will certainly be missing Pam when I go to St. Louis to visit. But I am so happy I got to spend some time with her last October. RIP my dear friend. I love you.

This is the •hope• that sustains us: the blessed reunion in the kingdom of God, what a day of •rejoicing• that will be! When we all see Jesus and shout the victory!

(Pray for others, who do not have this blessed •hope•)

I'm glad I got to see your mom one more time, Kim, when you gave the invitation on FaceBook to visit your church for a special service.

*Hugs,
