“ I wish this page would have been suggested at the memorial Thomas' workplace had for him, where there was a sizable group of people gathered to honor his life. I have lived in the building he maintained for six years, and I grew to love this man within weeks of my arrival here. I was sad to hear he'd passed before he got a chance to retire, as it was clear he was looking forward to his retirement. I would have liked to have known him better, but even though he always took a moment to say a few words, he was forever on the run! The only times I really got to know him were when he was called to my place to fix something. The man never stopped moving, and I dare to suggest it's what took him in the end--his complete and total dedication to this monster of a building. The elevators had been going out a lot, and were out the day he passed. This didn't stop him from running up and down many flights of stairs. The last few times I saw him, it was clear the job was getting the best of him, and I always made sure he knew he was appreciated. I've talked to many of his coworkers over the years, and every one of them has said something like, "When Thomas retires, this place will fall apart." Thomas was a good man--kind, intelligent, thoughtful, gentle, and had a good sense of humor. I hope he is living it up in his favorite vacation spot in heaven, surrounded by family and friends. He deserved that, anyone who knew him in the workplace would agree that the job took it from him. He will be missed by many. Rest in peace, Thomas. You were loved and appreciated by many.
